THEY MET, THEY COURTED, AND THEY MARRIED

F. J. Stubbs a popular hardware drummer, who frequents Ada, out of Kansas City, is in town and through the kindness of a good friend we have the following to tell on him:

He got on the train at Denison on Friday June 29 and as he made his way up the isle of a crowded coach he found only one vacant seat, this one opposite one occupied by a very beautiful woman. She had same filled with grips bundles etc, but kindly removed them for the gentlemen in quest of a seat. She two rode several miles without passing a single word, but finally the silence was broken and right then and there a conversation began that told each of an experience of love at first sight.

The train soon stopped at Durant to which place both were bound. They were about to part, but something said no. The man's soul had been set on fire; the woman's heart had found and conquered. "May I call this evening," said the traveling man, who was about ready to acknowledge his willingness to surrender, or rather, "propose" terms. The beautiful young woman, a Kentucky belle of 19, at first refused, but before taking many steps turned about and blushing said, "yes you may." The man of the road, saw her at the appointed time, at her aunt's home, and on the next evening, (for he did not see all his customers) he repeated the visit. This time he bade her good-bye with the understanding that he should meet her at the picnic at Coalgate on Wednesday July 4th. They met. They married. The bride returned to Durant to resume her visit with relatives. They were to meet in Shawnee this afternoon. She will accompany him on his commercial rounds for several days, when she will leave for a short visit to her home in Fulton, Ky.

The bride was Miss Frankie Platt, and has been spending the spring and summer with her father in Southern Texas. The father left Texas at the same time, but went a different route in order to make some business stopovers. If this quill-pusher had to suggest a moral in the above he would say: Fathers, travel with your daughters.

FARMERS' UNION IN QUARTERLY SESSION

The quarterly meeting of the 16th Recording District organization of the F. E. & C. U. of A. convened at Ada last Thursday at 2 p. m., President G. W. Black in the chair. Something over 40 locals were represented, each by from one to six delegates. There were in all sixty-four delegates in attendance.

The paramount subject for consideration at this meeting was the establishment of a cotton warehouse, either at Ada or some other convenient place; the patronage of such warehouse to be extended to all farmers and cotton men.

Friday afternoon the body went into an election of officers which resulted as follows: President O. W. Taylor, of Roff; Vice-pres., G. W. Black, of Ada; Sec.-Treas., A. L. Miles, of Roff; conductor, W. W. Norton, of Ada; Chaplain, J. M. Caves, of Roff; Executive committee—E. C. Sullivan, of Ada, W. V. Smith, of Roff, and N. S. Olive, of Allen; Doorkeeper, W. O. Allen, Roff; Delegates to state meeting, J. D. Looper, of Ada, and W. O. Allen, of Roff.

After their election the officers were duly installed by vice president J. A. Durbin. At 12 o'clock Friday night the meeting adjourned to meet on Thursday before the first Saturday in October at the town of Roff.

POLITICS DOESN'T COUNT; IT'S COUNTY SEAT FIGHTS

Muskogee, I. T., June 7.—Several delegations which have been here within the past few days to see the districting commission have developed a new turn in the situation so far as making districts for the constitutional convention is concerned. Instead of its being a sharp fight to obtain political majorities, it has developed into a fight by towns to be located as nearly as possible in the center of a district. This advantage of towns seems to have absorbed interest in the political situation to an unexpectedly large extent.

The reasons for this are apparent. Each town interested wants to be located as nearly as possible in the center of a district and thereby be almost sure to elect the constitutional delegate, and get the convention for nominating him held in that town. Again, new counties must be formed, and most of the delegations here are of the opinion that the constitutional districts will have a good deal to do with the future county lines. Therefore, a town located in the center of a district stands a good chance of becoming a county seat in the final struggle.

The general expression of the men who have been here on this mission has been, "we want a delegate to the convention who can do things and can get what he wants for his district or town, and this is a more important matter to us than whether the delegate shall be a democrat or republican."

This sentiment is the first surprising political situation since the statehood bill passed.

The statement that the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations had been apportioned to Judge Clayton, the Cherokee to Judge Gill, and the Creek and Seminole to Tams Bixby to district, is denied.

The commissioners state that they find that it is absolutely impossible to ascertain the political complexion of the districts from which people come to talk the matter over from these people. They do not know. They also state that it is clear that it is going to be a hard task to approximate the population of the districts. This is likely to lead to some districts having a much heavier population than others, but if so it will be because there is no way to determine accurately.

The members of the commission are of the opinion that an average population in the districts will be 14,000 for each district. It may be higher than that, however. In case 14,000 is the standard, Muskogee will get two delegates to the constitutional convention, having over 21,000 population. It will be the only town in the territory that will have population enough to be divided into two districts.

"THE CITIZENS' CLUB" WILL EDUCATE THE VOTERS

At 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning July 7th, 1906, a body composed of some of the best citizens from almost every section of the 16th Recording District met at Ada, I. T.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. J. M. Caves, who, upon request, stated the object of the meeting, which was: That a club be organized in and for the 16th Rec. Dist. in furtherance and for the protection of the people of the future state of Oklahoma. It was stated that the club organized should be non-political and that all men who desired to cooperate and use their efforts to bring about a better knowledge and understanding of the science of government in a way that would enable the masses of the people to intelligently vote upon the constitutional questions soon to be submitted to them, might become members.

A permanent organization was perfected and the following officers elected: Rev. J. M. Caves, Pres., J. D. Looper, Vice Pres., W. C. Jones, Treas., and Joel Terrell, Sec.

The organization was named "The Citizens' Club" and is to have sub-organizations throughout the District. It is the intention of the club to hold frequent meetings in every community for the purpose of educating and familiarizing the people with public issues.

Several well received speeches were made and at 11:30 the club adjourned to meet on the 1st Saturday in August.

ENDED HIS TROUBLES BY THE ROPE ROUTE

After several days of despondency J. E. Triplett, Friday afternoon at Fitzhugh terminated his troubles by hanging himself.

The suicide is a right well known merchant, of Fitzhugh, about 45 years old. Fearing self-violence on his part, his friends for several days had carefully guarded him. However, about 2:30 o'clock Friday he gave them the slip and soon after his body was discovered dangling in the barn, life just extinct. Physicians were summoned, but their efforts to resuscitate were futile.

Frantz on the Defensive.

Guthrie, O. T., July 7.—Inspectors McLaughlin and Burns who are conducting the investigation into the personal and official record of Governor Frantz, arrived in this city today. As soon as Governor Frantz returns from Snyder, where he inspected the irrigation system, they will give him a chance to present his side of the case and to defend himself. It is said that new material has been placed in the hands of the inspectors recently. Governor Frantz is expected home early tomorrow morning, when he will be given a hearing.

NEW STATE GETS MORE RURAL FREE DELIVERY

Washington.—Three new rural free delivery routes have been ordered established in Oklahoma effective August 15, and one in Indian Territory, effective Sept. 1. While the increase in the number of rural routes has been steady in Oklahoma, the new route authorized today for Indian Territory is the first one in some months. It will give that Territory a total of 18 rural routes. The newly authorized routes are as follows:

Busch, Roger Mills county (Route No. 6). Length of route, 23 miles, population served, 360; number of houses on route, 86. Colony, Washita county (Route No. 2) length of route, 26 miles; population served, 360; number of houses on route, 90.

Hydro, Caddo county (Route No. 4) length of route, 28 3/4 miles; population served, 420; number of houses on route, 105.

Konawa, Dist., 4, Ind. Ter. (Route No. 1) length of route 20 3/4 miles; population served 480; number of houses on route 120.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Road of the Graft.

The road of the grafter is not an easy one. The temptation to graft is insidious, and men who mean to conduct themselves with honesty and dignity may be betrayed into it. "Modern business methods" is a sufficiently euphonious term to fool a brisk and ambitious man not too much given to reflection or self-examination. And all goes well for a time. The bank account increases, the man feels himself to be shrewd and influential; he is able to put his family "at the top of the heap;" honors come easily to him, and young men are flattered to be associated with him in business. Then, says The Reader, the exposure comes. Those that have trusted him know him for what he is; his own specious plea of "the modern business method" sounds strangely inadequate even to himself. His name, which he hoped to see associated in the minds of men with great enterprises, and which he expected his sons to use as a sort of "open sesame," becomes, suddenly, the synonym for dishonesty, greed and failure. The grafter has, perhaps, thought himself hardened. He finds, to his dismay, that he is not. Shame awakens; conscience no longer sleeps. The dreams of his ambitious youth come to haunt him. He would give his fortune, many times duplicated, for the innocence and integrity of his early manhood. He is not a bad man—he can suffer, he can be ashamed, he can long for innocence. Perhaps, on reflection, there are no bad men. At any rate, the grafter has shown himself capable of dying broken-hearted or of going, a melancholy lunatic, to the asylum for the insane. His career requires stern metal. Let him who enters it be sure that his conscience is dead, his family pride buried, his self-respect quenched, and that he is obdurate to the reproachful tears of the women who love him! Having made quite, quite sure of all this, one might adopt a grafting career in an expectant spirit.

Balm for Baldheads.

Simultaneously, from two independent sources, has come striking testimony of the virtues of the hairless head. It is stated that there are no bald criminals and that there are no bald lunatics. Neither statement is laid down as absolute or infallible, but it is claimed that there are only just sufficient exceptions to prove the rule. The authority regarding the first statement is J. T. Riley, a magistrate of the Halifax bench, who said in court that he had only met with two bald "charges" in his 23 years' experience. With regard to the second statement, Rev. H. M. Neild, of Bradford, quotes "a head official" of the Rainhill asylum who assured him that he would never need the hospitality of that institution as he was quite bald. It is difficult to find authorities in London who wholeheartedly bear out these two theses. A gentleman who frequently visits Bethlehem hospital in an official capacity says: "My impression of the lunatics I meet there is that they are usually a shaggy race." An experienced police inspector or bore out to a great extent Mr. Riley's statement about the lack of baldheaded criminals, but he advanced a commonplace explanation. "Criminals," he said, "are notoriously a short-lived race. I admit I have seen very few baldheaded men in this chargineroom, but by the time a criminal reaches the bald-headed period of life he has either died or has reformed. There is one notable exception, however; that was Charles Peace, the murderer and burglar."

Stimulating Reading.

We cannot help living in some degree the lives of heroes who are constantly in our minds. Our characters are constantly being modified, shaped and molded by the suggestions which are thus held. The most helpful life stories for the average youth, says Success Magazine, are not the meteoric ones, the unaccountable ones, the astonishing ones like those of Napoleon, Oliver Cromwell, and Julius Caesar. The great stars of the race dazzle most boys. They admire, but they do not feel that they can imitate them. They like to read their lives, but they do not get the helpfulness and the encouragement from them that they do from reading the lives of those who have not startled the world so much. It is the triumph of the ordinary ability which is most helpful as an inspiration and encouragement. The life of Lincoln has been an infinitely greater inspiration to the world than the life of Napoleon or that of Julius Caesar.

When Kansas was suffering from the visitation of grasshopper the whole country united in raising money and contributing food and clothing for the sufferers. Many a mean man was developed then. The contributions were so generous that opportunity was afforded for graft. And more than one man now rich laid the foundation of his fortune in the cash or goods which he stole from the relief fund. Much the same thing has been noted in a smaller scale in the San Francisco case.

DOUGHNUTS AND CRULLERS

Various Recipes for These Breakfast Cakes Dearly Beloved of the Good American.

CRULLERS MADE OF RAISED DOUGH.—Set what is called a sponge over night, just as for bread. Use a pint of warm water and a large half-cupful of yeast. When the mixture is light add half a cupful of butter or sweet lard, a large cup of sugar, a teaspoonful of salt dissolved in water, one tablespoonful of cinnamon and a pinch of nutmeg. Stir in two beaten eggs, add flour until sufficiently stiff, knead it well and set away to rise. Then roll the dough out into half-inch thickness and cut into any forms desirable. The twist is pretty. Drop into hot lard, being sure to have quite a deep vessel of lard, as the turning of the cakes is liable to spatter up in the gas.

DOUGHNUTS, HAPPY-GO-LUCKY.—One gill of milk, one gill of sugar, three gills flour, one-third teaspoonful of salt, one-third of a nutmeg, grated; grated rind of a lemon, the yellow part; one full teaspoonful of baking powder, one egg. Beat the white of the egg to a stiff froth and add the beaten yolk and sugar. Add the flavorings, then milk and, last, flour into which you have stirred the baking powder. Drop a teaspoonful into hot butter or lard, let cook until brown, gently turning the doughnuts round as they fry.

SWISS DOUGHNUTS.—Boil a pint of milk and pour it over a pint of flour. Beat it very smooth, and when it is cool add four eggs, thoroughly well beaten, yolks and whites separately, always stirring in yolks first. Then add the melted butter and a pinch of salt. Sprinkle your board with flour to make it easy to form into rings. Cook in plenty of boiling lard or butter. Delicious with coffee for a nice breakfast.

"YES" AND "NO" APPLE BALLS.—Pare and steam six moderately sour apples until they are soft and white. Then rub them through a colander into a bowl, add a teaspoonful of sour lemon juice to each apple, one-half an ounce of gelatine to every six apples, and sugar to taste. Keep in a warm place until the gelatine is dissolved, then cool. Stir in briskly a meringue mixture made of the whites of four eggs and four ounces of sugar. Drop this snowy, frothy mixture in balls into a dish in which you wish to serve it. Keep as much a pyramidal shape as possible, and decorate each ball with candied cherries. —New York World.

FOR THE GARDENER.

The China Aster Seems to Belong to Autumn and May Be Started Outside.

The China aster is one of the flowers which it seems to me belongs to early autumn rather than to summer. Consequently, I do not deem it worth while to plant it inside in order to hasten its period of blooming. I should rather have these flowers through September and the first half of October than through July and August, but if one wishes the early blossoms it is a simple matter to start the seeds indoors, choosing the Queen of the Market, which is the earliest flowering strain of asters. One can now get these in a variety of colors.

During the warmer days the plants will be greatly benefited if the boxes are set on a sunny porch out of doors or on the ledge of an open window. They will thus be more vigorous and hardy and will endure the transplanting into the garden much better. Be careful not to apply too much water to the soil, keeping it barely moist but not wet, and also do not try to force the plants too rapidly in a very warm room. Most of them will thrive better in a comparatively cool temperature. Care must be taken to shade the tiny seedlings as they are starting, in order that they may not be dried out through the direct action of the sun. Do not have more plants than can enjoy the full benefit of sun and air.—Good Housekeeping.

To Clean Old Oak.

To clean old oak, whether furniture or paneling, dust it thoroughly and then wash it with warm beer, using a soft brush for carvings. Meanwhile, boil together two quarts of beer, one ounce of beeswax and one ounce of moist brown sugar until the wax and sugar are perfectly dissolved. Then apply this with a large, soft brush, and when quite dry, rub it until bright with clean, soft cloths. Some people, after washing with the beer, when dry polish it with a cloth slightly sprinkled with paraffin oil.

On a Transatlantic Liner

By PHILIP VERRILL M'GHELS

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

On the transatlantic liner there were two cabin passengers who were neither seasick nor lovesick, and, as if this in itself were not sufficiently remarkable, Ada was beautiful, clever and young, while Seton was manly, wholesome and wise.

Grown weary of her reading, Ada glanced across the deck. A man there leaned against the rail, smoking. She noted the back of his head and thought of a boy with whom, on a time, she had played at a game entitled: "Courtship, Marriage and Divorce."

The man, who was Seton, turned about. Then she saw that he was, in very fact, that self-same boy, expanded and sand-papered off, according to a plan of civilization. Their glances met. He oscillated where he was for a second, and then came leisurely forward, raising his cap in salutation.

"Why, it's Seton Lowe—Mr. Lowe," she said, "I didn't even know you were aboard."

"No, I came a little unexpectedly," he confessed. "I took the trip to avoid my friends."

"Oh; then I trust you will be successful," she answered, somewhat icily.

He made no attempt to reconstruct his observation. They were silent for a moment.

"It's going to be a smooth, tedious trip," he presently stated.

"It looks that way—at present," she agreed.

He glanced at her furtively, after which she abruptly scanned him over with a keener interest.

"You are not alone?" she inquired. "Practically, yes."

"Why, I thought—I read—wasn't it true? Shouldn't your wedding—"

"Should have come off to-day," he supplied, nonchalantly. "All of it true, so far as it went."

"Oh . . . Really? . . . Then Miss Schuyler—"

"Exercised her divine prerogative of changing her mind. She is wearing the other man."

"Wearing?"

"Yes. They put us on and off like hats. I trust he will find it wearing."

Ada's eyes glistened, somewhat fiercely. "I have known men who renewed their ties as often as we choose between our hats," she said. "The fact of changing the heart is quite as rampant as that of altering the mind."

"Personal experience is the hot-house of rancor," he told her, "and I am still under glass."

"Well, do you fondly imagine you are all alone in an enjoyment of rancor?"

"My fault-finding is at first hand," he answered, "while yours should be vicarious only, at the utmost."

"Indeed!" she said.

He looked at her sharply and blinked through the smoke of his pipe.

"See here," he blurted, "you were not the Miss Lee Cavendish who was engaged to some fellow from Oxford?"

"You are neither acute nor complimentary, not to know—or to assume so little interest."

"H'm," he mused, "I—I always called you Ada. I never supposed that fellow—"

He glanced at her again, earnestly. "You were always a sensible girl," he observed. "Shall I tell you what I've done?"

"Not if you wish it kept a secret."

"I've joined the Association of Unmitigated Bachelors," he imparted.

"I've taken a solemn vow never to ask any maid, girl or woman on earth to become my wife."

She looked at him oddly, her face slightly reddened.

"I've joined myself," she murmured. "Not the bachelors."

"No, the Bachelor Girls. We have each of us taken a grave and reverend obligation never to wed any lad, youth or man who may, can or must ask us to become his wife, mate or partner for life, if we live to be a thousand."

"You don't say!" he exclaimed, with frank admiration. "I'm mighty glad to hear it. Ada, we shall get along this voyage delightfully. Let us shake hands."

She placed her dainty hand in his, for a funny little second, and the glance that played between them met on neutral ground.

this morning. Do you like whales more or less than you love sea-gulls?" "Why should I like one or the other more or less?"

"Well—a whale is a mammal—and so is man."

"Man is a beast," she corrected. "Yes, I suppose he is. And a woman—a woman is a critter."

"Thanks. I was afraid you would call woman either an angel or a mermaid."

"No," he replied, reflectively. "I never took home either feathers or scales, on—on my coat lapel."

"You can actually speak about—that affair, and—love?" She blushed as she nearly missed fire on the final word.

"Why not?" he inquired. "The sea is doing me good. I shall be myself once more in a week."

"And begin to regret your unmitigated bachelor solemnities?"

"Certainly not. I'd like to see the girl who could make me regret such a sensible step."

He looked so deeply into Ada's eyes as he spoke that she saw the wholesome, honest boy she had known so happily, once upon a time. Then he presently added:

"Besides, that's done—and there's an end to it."

Something happened in Ada's feminine mind. She said:

"That sounds exactly like the things you used to say so long ago. Just between our childish calms and storms."

A bright light flashed in his eyes, for a second, to counter the sparkle in hers.

"Ada, there's nothing poetic or reminiscent about me now," he confessed, "but everything feels to me decidedly like spring."

With a nod she conceded he had paid her back. Nevertheless, she ignored his gentle repartee.

"Was it spring the whole year through, when we were two foolish children?" she queried.

"I never thought," he admitted, "but—hang it all—I believe it was."

The sole purpose of making an ocean voyage so protracted is to entrap the innocent passengers into vague little sighs of inconsequent regret when at length it is finally ended.

Both Seton and Ada were apostles of inconsequence.

That final evening they sat on the deck and beheld the moon arise like a red-hot disk from somewhere over the edge. Ada looked at it steadily.

"The poor old thing must take us very seriously," she said, "for look at the wrinkles on her brow."

"I used to think a sillier thing than that—what a lot of rings it would make, cut out, one inside the other."

He was silent for a moment, mentally carving up the unsuspecting planet. Then he observed:

"They would all be plain gold rings."

"Yes, I know. That was part of the idea. I said it was woefully silly."

"Perhaps you thought you would like one of the rings?"

"Perhaps I did," she confessed. "I was very young."

He suppressed a tentative feeling of excitement.

"Of course, you don't wish for anything of the sort any longer?" he inquired, calmly.

"How could I, Mr. Lowe?"

"I was trying to think."

"You were trying to think what?"

"How we could both get out of it. I mean—how I—we—well, let it go the way I said it first."

She looked at him steadily, and felt herself grow pale and warm alternately.

"Get out of what?" she murmured.

"Ada, we can't get out of the fact that we love one another, devotedly," he announced with a boldness that took away her breath. "When we used to play, as children, we used to say we loved each other for the courtship, and that we loved each other for the marriage, and then, after the divorce, we made up and said we loved each other again, so as to begin the game all over. So we can't get out of that, now can we? The only question is how to get around our solemn vows to the bachelor associations."

"But—Seton—"

"I know. I've always said you are a sweet, sensible girl. If you advise it, I'll simply break my pledge."

"But I don't advise it. I don't advise anything. I certainly—"

"Don't you love me, sweetheart, just enough to help me out?"

She was silent for a moment. He took her hand. It was trembling, but it lay in his without alarm. He looked in her eyes, and, even in the moonlight, saw the answer he needed.

Then finally Seton, pressing his fist to his heart, with all his strength, discovered he was gazing in rapture on the moon. He thought what a beautiful plain gold ring he could cut from the splendor of the disk.

Plenty of Industry.

Mr. Quiller-Couch certainly cannot be accused of lack of industry. It is not very long since he brought out "The Mayor of Troy;" he has two serial novels running in magazines; he is preparing to publish a collection of verses and little essays under the title of "A Cornish Window," and he is at work on a school history of English literature arranged on a plan of his own.

Webfoot Humility.

Crocuses are in bloom down along the Columbia. Rose shoots are several inches long. Spring beauties are blossoming in the woods. Farmers are plowing, birds are singing, and meanwhile the unhappy east has a temperature varying from 4 to 26 degrees below zero. Are we worthy of our blessings?

Before the paleface came there was no poison in the Indian's corn.

Tulle in Millinery and Neckwear

Once again illusion bows bedecked fair woman; this time they are worn at the front, the choux at the back utterly out. More bows of white have been noticed so far, but the season may presently show the variety that raged a couple of years back.

In millinery tulle is used a great deal. Evening hats especially are thus adorned, and a very appropriate trimming it makes. An old-rose voile costume was lately seen worn with an all-white hat, whose only trimming as observed from the back was a great ruche of white tulle, covering the wide bandeau and falling well over the hair. When the wearer gazed about, a white plume was visible curling about the crown of the hat. This was a very airy chapeau, just the thing for a summer evening outing.

And nowadays summer evening outings are so much the rule, summer gayeties making us once solemn Americans a very gay people indeed—taking away the reproach that we take our pleasures too seriously, and making need for clothes appropriate to the diversions. Not only do carriage folk dress nowadays, but also the plebeian street car, the open trolley, shows its load of prettily costumed women. A voile suit of some delicate color answers admirably for wear at summer park and private party, and the voiles of the season come in most beautiful shades, the material back in fashion with a certainty, too pretty long to be vanished.

The hat here pictured is typical of those seen on the summer girl of the day. It is a charming gray crin fluff with tulle and with yellow roses, making beautiful contrast on the soft gray—a French combination and artistic.

Very smart and coquettish is the small hat with a ruche of tulle about the crown and at one side a tight bunch of roses and the ubiquitous quill, under the brim of course some more roses. Posies, posies everywhere adding their quota to the gayeties.

At present the sailors are considerably much trimmed, but before the summer's over we may have the simple old sailor back again, a strictly utilitarian protection for the head. But we must confess we like the rose and tulle bedecked ones; think them more becoming.

The other day we saw on a hat a half wreath of peach blossoms that looked so real we surely got a whiff of their fragrance across the car; wanted to ask the maiden where under the sun she found the tree whereon they grew. Artificial flowers never were so beautiful as this year, I am sure; never so natural looking.

In The World of Fashion

LACE AND LINEN COMBINATION.

Soft mulls rather than stiffly starched laws are the order of the day; these are a blessing to the laundress as they "do up" more easily and keep clean longer. The lingerie this season is even more fragile in appearance than usual, now one affects the finest of materials and less elaboration of lace insets; this, too, is a blessing to the home dressmaker, who can keep in style without wearing herself all out in the attempt.

Long coats are few and far between, and the variety of short ones is marvelous—one would have thought all the ideas exhausted long ago. They are so much cooler for summer wear, and they allow of display of the exquisite blouse. The present fashions make the streets very festive, so much white finery seen. Already numbers of white frocks have appeared, and though we may not have the white season of last summer repeated, there certainly is to be a great deal of white worn. White plumes are seen, almost always falling over the hair at the back, a novel and picturesque disposal. Last evening we noticed an attractive hat, one of the longish turbans with the only trimming a wreath of small flowers, the wreath elongated at the back and quite separated from the hat, lying on the girl's soft tresses like a garland. The arrangement of artificial flowers this season seems to us more natural and effective than usual, and the flowers so pretty.

Silk is much worn this spring, taffeta and rough weaves both. The colored pongees are all made with short skirts, and shortest jackets, evidently meant for business; and they certainly do seem to be just the thing for summer pedestrianizing. The taffetas are usually made walking length; in spite of dire predictions we see almost no long trained gowns on the street. And, by the way, a trim taffeta or pongee suit, made latest mode, can be worn for almost any occasion the summer may bring forth. Of course one may wear with such a suit the loveliest of lingerie blouses, which, with its elbow sleeves and fine handwork, will look purified enough for anything.

At the afternoon-tea shops one sees some of the prettiest of summer toilets. A charming one sported itself the other day at one of these places where I happened to drop in for a refreshing cup, and I wondered if the wearer gave the charm to the dress or the dress most adorned the lady—both were so worth looking at. The lady was one of those erect, slim women, slim without being in the least scrawny; her hair just touched with gray, softly fluffy about a bright, youthful face and crowned with a black chip hat trimmed simply with a wreath of white roses. The skirt and short coat were of blue taffeta, the sleeves of the latter giving the unmistakable style; they came above the elbow and a deep frill of creamy lace brought them down considerably longer.

The princess costume appears in all forms, some good, others indifferent, others bad. The one here pictured is an excellent model, designed by the Dry Goods Economist. The short, puffed sleeves give the correct shoulder line, the front panel and short waist line relieves what otherwise would be too severe for any save an absolutely perfect figure—which few of us, alas, possess. But both art and nature are coming to the assistance of poor woman with her unnatural mode of life; exercise and good dress-makers are building up deficiencies.

The Marriage of Muggsy

By W. H. ALBURN

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

So it happened that Muggsy and Mary Ann the waitress became engaged. Muggsy was to borrow some money from a friend, and get a job, and be married.

Now, it is hard for a burglarious loafer to get a job. It is harder still for him to borrow money. But after five days of tramping the streets and visiting mills and factories, and striking old friends intermittently for pecuniary aid, he obtained the promise of work in a foundry, to begin the following Monday, and a former "pal" lent him $10 to begin housekeeping with. So he was to be married on Sunday.

It was Saturday night, and Mary Ann's fiancé was strolling through the streets, restless and happy. To-morrow he would be married. It seemed impossible, and yet there could be no doubt of it.

Muggsy found himself staring vacantly into a shop window. The shop was closed, for it was late; and the lights in the windows were dim. There were three gilded balls over the door.

Then Muggsy's gaze fell upon a tray of rings in the window, and he started. The awful truth flashed upon him. When people get married they use wedding rings! And he had forgotten the ring.

There was an old shoe lying in the street. In a moment he had seized the shoe, rested it on the glass above the crack, inserted his left elbow in the shoe, closed his fist and struck it a powerful blow with his right hand.

He took only one ring; once he would have taken the whole tray. He was triumphant, but he was in danger. He ran quickly down the street to a passageway he knew of, leading to an alley and thence to another street, where he would be safe.

But suddenly a blue uniform loomed up, and an excited voice ordered the fugitive to stop. A pistol shot added force to the command. Muggsy was frightened. He darted into the passageway, the patrolman after him in full chase. A fence had been built there since last he came that way, and he was cornered.

Muggsy was a man of peace. The game was up, and he surrendered. When the turnkey searched him at the police station he still had the ring. It went into an envelope marked "Exhibit A."

There was a big docket in police court on Monday morning. An endless line of "drunks" shuffled out of the reeking "bull pen" and stood, nervously expectant, before the bench where the magnanimous Judge O'Rourke dispensed fines and imprisonment for the protection of society. "Well, well!" ejaculated his honor, with a broad grin. "Not very cheerful this morning, Muggsy. What is it now, Mooney?"

"Burglary and larceny, your honor—at 'old tricks'—smashed a jewelry window an' copped a ring—a wedding ring, too." The court officer smiled indulgently and the prosecuting attorney inspected the ring, while the clerk read the affidavit, and the spectators craned forward with interest—for the prisoner had many acquaintances present.

The proof was too easy. The prosecutor yawned, and held up the ring for the inspection of the court.

"Why didn't you take the rest?" he asked. "This ain't worth much, and there was a whole trayful."

"I didn't need any more," muttered Muggsy.

"Didn't need any more?" repeated the prosecutor, while the court attaches and police reporters showed signs of interest. "Then you confess to the theft?" he shrewdly added.

"Naw, I don't confess nothin'."

"Needed a wedding ring, did you, Muggsy?" queried his honor, with a smile that lit up the court-room.

"That reminds me," remarked Lieut. O'Hara. "We found a marriage license in his clothes—Exhibit B over there. It's got his name on, too, only he says it's for a cousin as has the same name as he has, an' was to be married yesterday. I wonder—" and while he was wondering, a light suffused his massive face.

Meanwhile a reporter was inspecting the marriage license. He was a tall, lean scribe, with a lazy, far-away look, and wore an eternal stogie in his mouth. He leaned over to the judge.

"The girl's name is Mary Ann Evans," he said. "Maybe she's here. She'd make a good witness."

Now, his honor had great respect for this particular reporter. Besides, he was under obligation to him for certain unnamed favors.

"Have you any witnesses?" he asked the prisoner.

"Me? Naw."

The judge handed the license to the court officer.

"Is Mary Ann Evans here present?" roared Mooney.

Muggsy jerked himself erect, his square jaw set, his eyes flashing, and his fists clenched.

"Stop that, Mr. Officer!" he cried. Mooney started back, and the court-room stared in astonished silence.

"I don't want that there name mentioned in this d—d p'lice court!" the prisoner gasped.

The judge's bland smile had congealed. The reporter critically poised his stogie and emitted a low, thoughtful whistle.

Then the spell was broken by a commotion beyond the railing among the spectators, and a little figure with curly hair and freckled face almost hidden beneath a faded shawl darted past the officer at the gate and stepped to the judge's bench. A young lad about to follow her was denied admittance. Muggsy was abashed. His figure slumped back to its normal posture, and again he gazed at the floor.

"P-please, sir, I'm here," faltered the figure under the shawl, while a pair of greenish-yellow eyes roved back and forth between judge and prisoner.

"Are you Mary Ann Evans?" asked his honor.

"Y-yes, sir. An' I came here this mornin' because Jimmy—that's my brother—seen in the paper that Muggsy was arrested, an' he said they'd try him this mornin'." An' I thought mebbe I could—do sumpin' fer 'im." Further elucidation was interrupted by the necessity for stopping a flow of tears with one corner of her shawl.

"Is it this man, or his cousin, that you were going to marry?" asked the judge.

Mary Ann checked an impulse to answer, and looked to the prisoner for guidance. Muggsy's eyes slowly roved from the floor, met hers, and read their honest appeal. That look shamed the duplicity out of him. He stepped nearer the judge, while the little group narrowed around the affianced pair, and he addressed the judge in a voice firm, but low, so that the curiosity-mongers beyond the railing might not hear.

"I'll tell ye the truth, yer honor," he said, "an' it'll be the first time I ever told it to ye. I lied w'en I said the license was fer me cousin, an' I lied about breakin' the windy by accident. This little girl had promised to marry me, yer honor, an' the wedding was to 'a' been yesterday. An' w'en I happened to think how I didn't have no ring, an' how I needed one, an' didn't have no money to buy one, nor nothin', w'y I don't know how it was, yer honor, but I just couldn't help forgettin' I'd reformed, an' gittin' a ring the best way I could. An' now I s'pose I got to go to the Works again. An' I don't care much, fer I don't s'pose Mary Ann'll have anything to do with me now—fer she's a decent, respectable girl, yer honor, an' not like me. Only, I don't know what she'll do, on account of bein' out of a job, an' nobody to take care of her. But it's all up now, an' you might as well give me the sentence right away, yer honor; fer there can't be no wedding, an' my job's lost, an' it's no use, I guess, tryin' to be decent."

"What job's that?" asked the prosecutor. The suggestion of Muggsy at work, following close upon the revelation of Muggsy in love, staggered him.

Thereupon the prisoner filled in the details of the story. His narrative was supplemented by the testimony of a policeman who recognized Mary Ann and had known her father.

"Are you still willing to marry him?" asked the judge, curiously.

"Why, of course!" and Mary Ann stared at him in surprise. "I know he'll never do such a thing again. An' I guess I can git along somehow till he gets out, an' gits another job."

"Well, in view of the circumstances, I won't make it so long as I otherwise would," began the judge, as he resumed his judicial air. "It will be—"

But the reportorial face had suddenly approached his honor's ear, and there was a quiet little conference, in which the prosecutor presently joined.

"It will be—ahem!"—resumed his honor, when the heads separated—"three months and costs." He paused, impressively. "And, in view of certain extenuating circumstances—the workhouse sentence is suspended during good behavior, and the fine to be paid at the convenience of the prisoner."

Muggsy stared stupidly.

"Go on!" said Mooney, nudging him good-naturedly. "No, not that way," as the prisoner started back toward the "bull pen." "Out here, with your girl. You're free, as long as you behave yourself. See?"

Muggsy saw, and with a radiant smile overspread his ugly face as he grasped Mary Ann's hand, and they turned away, too happy for speech.

"Wait a minute," whispered the tall reporter. "Your job?"

The smile faded.

"It was mighty hard to git, and now I've lost it," Muggsy faltered. "I was to report fer work this mornin'."

"Won't you sign this, judge?" asked the scribe.

His honor took from him the sheet of official court paper and read:

Foreman of the — Foundry: The presence of Mr. Maguire has been required at an important trial this morning. He informs me that as a result of rendering the court this service he may lose the employment you have promised him. Allow me to request that his enforced absence may not deprive a deserving man of the means of earning a livelihood for himself and family.

The genial smile broke out again, and the judge signed the letter. When he handed it to Muggsy there was a bank note folded in it.

"You can pay this back some time, if you feel like it," he said. "Now, get married; and then report for work, and give the boss this paper. It'll be all right. Mr. Jones!"

An old colored minister, who haunted the police courts and rescued the black sheep of his flock from frequent trouble, arose and bowed with rheumatic dignity.

"Take this couple into my private office and tie them up," ordered the judge.

The bridal pair followed the aged pastor from the courtroom amid a roar of applause, and the court officer called the next case.

A WOMAN'S ORDEAL DREADS DOCTOR'S QUESTIONS

Thousands Write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and Receive Valuable Advice Absolutely Confidential and Free

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions in regard to her private life, even when those questions are asked by her family physician, and many of her shawl.

continue to suffer rather than submit to examinations which so many physicians propose in order to intelligently treat the disease; and this is the reason why so many physicians fail to cure female disease.

This is also the reason why thousands upon thousands of women are corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can confide every detail of their illness, and from her great knowledge, obtained from years of experience in treating female ills, Mrs. Pinkham can advise sick women more wisely than the local physician.

Read how Mrs. Pinkham helped Mrs. T. C. Willadsen of Manning, Ia. She writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude in words. Before I wrote to you telling you how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steadily, and spent lots of money in medicines besides, but it all failed to do any good. I had female trouble and would daily have fainting spells, backache, bearing-down pains, and my monthly periods were very irregular and finally ceased. I wrote to you for your advice and received a letter full of instructions just what to do, and also commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I have been restored to perfect health. Had it not been for you I would have been in my grave to-day."

Mountains of proof establish the fact that no medicine in the world equals Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for restoring women's health.

A Matter of Courtesy, Merely.

FACE ALL BROKEN OUT.

Troubled Almost a Year—Complexion Now Perfect and Skin Soft, White and Velvety.

"I had been troubled with a breaking out on my face and arms for almost a year and had the services of several physicians, but they didn't seem to do any good. Some time ago one of my friends recommended Cuticura to me. I secured some, and after using it several months I was completely cured. I can highly recommend Cuticura Soap as being the very best complexion soap made. It creates a perfect complexion, leaving the skin soft, white and velvety. I now use Cuticura Soap all the time and recommend its use to my friends. Maud Loggins, R. F. D. No. 1, Sylvia, Tenn., Aug. 1, 1905."

Exuberance of Love Spasmodically Manifested Results in Mortification.

She was seated in the gloaming, a happy smile on her pretty, pensive face, when her elderly aunt entered. Then, as she looked upon the kind old face, a feeling rushed upon her that she must share her wonderful news with somebody—she must let someone into the secret which till then had been the sole possession of herself and Harold. She sprang up and flung her arms about her aunt's neck.

"Oh, auntie," she cried impulsively, "you do love me, don't you? Kiss me, auntie, and tell me you do—kiss me!"

But only an alarming gurgle came from the old lady for a moment. Then she said, gasping indignantly:

"Kiss you, if you ain't careful I'll shake the life out of you. You very nearly made me swallow my teeth!"

By some means a mother and daughter managed to gain access to Paderewski's sanctum. The mother was proud of her daughter and the daughter had aspirations. She desired Paderewski's opinion of her skill. Paderewski listened, or appeared to, while the mother beat time approvingly. At last, with a final crash, the girl rose from the stool and the mother flushed with pleasure. "Tell me," she whispered to the artist, "tell me in confidence. What do you think of her?" Amiablely the artist rubbed his hands together. "I think she must be very charitable. Surely she leteth not her left hand know what her right hand doeth."

GO ON AND DIG.

Now that oil and gas has been brought in in vast volume at Wewoka, encouragement is offered for the sinking of a deep well in Ada. We have long been considered within the oil and gas belt, and now a rich flow just 35 miles away makes it still more probable. Possibly the old earth beneath us is fairly bursting with its burden of wealth. Somebody hurry and punch into it and let her spurt!

TAKING NOTICE OF US.

Since the passage of the enabling act everybody is paying more attention to our territories. Konawa has landed a rural route, making now a grand total of 18 free delivery routes in Indian Territory. Even the postal authorities are sitting up and taking a little notice of us—and before we get a congressman at court to demand a divy of good things.

SOME people are exercising themselves mightily about a nice name for the embryo state. Why not call it Oklahoma?

In justice to the milk man be it said that, while the city council wants the dairies moved beyond the city limits, the main reason is not simply to shove that industry out of reach of the water pipes.

MONDAY at Shawnee the Democratic organizations of the two territories will meet and merge and prepare to eradicate the greatest evil having root in the new commonwealth—namely, Republicanism.

THE suggestion to make four year terms for all offices in the new state seems to be gaining favor. It isn't a bad idea. The frequency of the old biennial election in many respects is a nuisance to both candidates and electors.

MORE NORMAL SCHOOL

Every Town Will Want a New State Institution.

In the re-arrangements of the state institutions of Oklahoma, it is possible that Indian Territory may ask for some of the educational institutions now located on the Oklahoma side, and in order to strengthen their positions the state university, at Norman, and the agricultural and mechanical college at Stillwater, are both making great efforts to get into school for next year as many students as possible from the Indian Territory side, and are making preparations to care for a large number of additional students from the eastern end of the new state. Free tuition has been allowed to Indian Territory students for two years, but it has not been generally known.

It is generally believed that the university, agricultural college, and negro university will remain where they are, as all are very centrally located. It is possible that the location of one of the normal schools may be changed, but the towns which now have normal schools will play against that threat the proposition to locate two new normals in Indian Territory, to be known as the Northeastern and Southeastern. That plan will be supported by the Indian Territory towns which would like to secure the new schools. Claremore and Tahlequah are already waging an active campaign for the northeastern school, while Vinita, Muskogee and Okmulgee also want to be considered in the race. Hartshorne and South McAlester are after the southeastern school, with Ada, Atoka, Ardmore and Pauls Valley all to be considered.

President A. C. Scott, of the A. & M. College, believes that all of the Oklahoma schools will have a large increase in attendance next year, as a result of the passage of the statehood bill.

There is a certain young couple in Ada who are making a fight against the electric light company. They just simply turn out the lights.

Dr. Ligon has sold his residence in Sunrise to Mr. Copeland of Center. Mr. Bumpas of Center will move to Ada and reside therein. Dr. Ligon will build a beautiful residence in East Sunrise.

A phone from Rev. Stone this morning is that owing to the continued illness of his wife he cannot be here to preach at the C. P. church tomorrow as was announced.

Mrs. Julia Flemming, of 14th street has as guests: her daughter Mrs. J. E. Cross; grand-daughter, Mrs. M. F. Chaney; and Masters Jack and Rube Chaney, all of Chickasha. They will visit in Ada about two weeks.

University News.

Norman, Okla., July Special.—Prof. Herman L. Sphar, head of the German Department of the State University of Oklahoma has tendered his resignation to accept a position as Consul at Breslau, Germany. Prof. Sphar had just been elected to the position, who will be secured to fill the vacancy is not known as yet.

One of the most interesting lists which has ever been compiled by the office force at the University of Oklahoma is the one just finished which shows the number of students who are entirely or partly working their way through the University. Of the students who were in attendance last year about ten per cent were entirely and over twenty-five per cent partly self supporting. The greater part of the work which was done by the boys was done down in the town, where odd jobs of all kinds were picked up. At the University several of the boys acted as janitors, and four of the students were employed as stenographers.

Several of the boys acted as managers of boarding clubs and in this way paid for their board and room. The list only shows that the student who comes with the determination to work his way through is generally able to find some kind of employment by which he can in his spare time make the greater part of his expenses at the University.

Deputy's Good Haul.

Muskogee, I. T., July 7.—John Cordell, deputy U. S. Marshal at Wewoka, will receive for the past fiscal year $2,500 which is $1,000 more than any other field deputy in the western district will get. The field deputies are on the fee system, but they are limited to $1,500 per year and when their fees are in excess of that the excess must be turned in to the government. On account of the difficult and dangerous work in the Wewoka district, Cordell is allowed $1,000 more than the other deputies, provided his fees amount to that much. His fees are over the $2,500 mark.

On Westward for Land.

Since the school land board has filed on all the vacant land in Oklahoma the land offices in Arizona and New Mexico are experiencing a boom. Reports from western Beaver county that homeseekers who went to Beaver county hoping to file on vacant land are now flocking across the line to the land office at Clayton, N. M. The two territories to the west of Oklahoma will profit by the fact that there is no more land to homestead in this country and it is expected that the rush will continue until all vacant land available for agricultural purposes is taken up.

CHANCE TO ADVERTISE ADA.

Write-Up In Big Magazine Offered Without Price.

A. Lyman Donlin, advertising agent of Sturm's Statehood magazine, arrived in Ada Saturday.

He has a good proposition to submit to the commercial club. For every 20 subscribers secured in Ada for the magazine the town will be given one page of space in which it may boost itself abroad.

The club will simply be asked to appoint a committee to assist Mr. Donlin in canvassing the town. One dollar a year is the price of the periodical and it is widely recognized as an excellent publication. It now has a circulation of 23,000 which is constantly growing. Our city needs to be advertised abroad; this seems a good opportunity and the commercial club should take hold of it and help secure several pages of valuable space

HELD FOR DEFRAUDING.

Indian Gaffer Impersonated Officer and Got Pinched.

Wylie McIntosh was arrested in Muskogee Thursday on a charge of defrauding Creek citizens and impersonating an officer of the government.

The complaint was sworn out in the commissioner's court by Tams Bixby, commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes.

The complaint charges unlawful and felonious intent to defraud Nellie Redding, by falsely representing that he (McIntosh) could have her name placed on the citizenship rolls, and that he was employed by the United States government to do this kind of work.

McIntosh waived examination before U. S. Commissioner W. R. Hoyt, and was held to await the action of the grand jury.

There are hundreds of cases of this kind, but so far as known McIntosh is the first man to be prosecuted. It is understood cases of this character will be vigorously prosecuted hereafter.—Muskogee Phoenix.

CREEKS ARE DEMOCRATS.

Resent Treatment Received From Administration.

Muskogee, I. T., July 7.—Chief Porter of the Creeks states that it is his belief that three-fifths of the Creek Indians are Democrats. He also states that when it comes to politics, especially among the fullbloods, there will be a lining up much as there was during the war. About the only knowledge that the fullblood has of Democrats and Republicans is that onesidedness for the South and the other for the North. Chief Porter also says that the Democrats will have a great advantage with the Indian when it comes to stump speaking, as the Indian is prejudiced at the treatment he has received at the hands of the government, and he will hold the administration responsible for it.

17th District Democrats.

The Democratic executive committee of the 17th Recording district met at Pauls Valley Monday at the Commercial club rooms in response to a call issued by A. F. Pyeatt, chairman of the Democratic executive committee for the district.

Resolutions were passed favoring the selection of all officers, both state and county, by primary vote.

A committee of five was appointed to assist the different committeemen in organizing the sections of this district.

No Council Quorum.

The adjourned meeting of the city council Thursday night had a scant attendance. Sufficient members not appearing to constitute a quorum another adjournment was taken until Monday night. The supporters of the anti-dairy ordinance are determined to secure its passage and make the cows move out of town.

The Duty of Forgiveness.

This is the title of the Sabbath school lesson for tomorrow, and is found in Matt. 18: 21-35. Services at the Presbyterian church will begin promptly at 9:45. All are cordially invited.

At the C. P. Church.

Rev. McRuse will preach at 11 a. m. There will be no service at night on account of the Union Temperance meeting at the Baptist church. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend.

Temperance Rally.

Sunday night at the Baptist church there will be a Union service by all Ada churches and all other persons interested in the cause of temperance. The subject will be handled in a practical manner and the meeting is expected to result in the organization of an anti-saloon league.

Wounded Man Dies.

Ardmore, I. T., July 7.—Del Gibson, who was shot by City Marshal Bud Moore, at Mill Creek, on June 15, died yesterday of wounds. Gibson was intoxicated and resisted arrest and in the fight he was shot through the body by the officer.

A Tragic Finish.

A watchman's neglect permitted a leak in the Great North Sea dyke, which a child's finger could have stopped, to become a ruinous break, devastating an entire province of Holland. In like manner Kenneth McIver, of Vanceboro, Me., permitted a little cold to go unnoticed until a tragic finish was only averted by Dr. King's New Discovery. He writes: "Three doctors gave me up to die of lung inflammation, caused by a neglected cold; but Dr. King's New Discovery saved my life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure at G. M. Ramsey & Dr. F.
